ATTORNEY GENERAL

Moving Forward Together Town Hall

Since the election, many across the Commonwealth have been worried and anxious. Now they are ready for action. That's because there is much at stake as President Donald Trump and Speaker Paul Ryan take charge. We know we need to find a way forward to build on and protect the progress we've made in our state and nation. And we need to do it together.

Attorney General Maura Healey has said that she is willing to work with President Trump and the Republican Congress when they are acting in the best interests of the people of Massachusetts. But she has said that when the federal government overreaches, she will be our first line of defense against illegal actions and unconstitutional campaign promises. Already Maura has intervened in a suit against the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, defended the Obama administration's decision to shut-down the national accrediting agency behind predatory for-profit schools, and protected vital emissions standards for heavy vehicles passing through our communities. Within days of the immigration ban, she was one of the first AG's to file suit against the Trump administration.
